A probe being passed, the bail was found to have penetrated the abdominal walls in a direction downwards and to the left side. The bail was found to have passed through the pyloric extremity of the stomach, and was found to be embedded to the left of the spinal column. The peritoneal cavity contained sixty ounces of fluid blood. Death was caused by intense hemorrhage and peritonitis, the result of a pistol shot wound of the abdomen. From the direction taken by the bullet, Dr. Shine is of the opinion that it was not discharged through the panel of the door, and believes the door must have been open at the time of the shooting.
